Story

People with various religious backgrounds encounter each other everyday in our society. That's exciting and broadens the horizon, but many times it also leads to conflict or even war. Guide to World Religion shows that knowledge is a powerful weapon against prejudice and miscommunication. The main points of Judaism, Christianity, Islam, Buddhism and Hinduism are explained briefly. This book supports our understanding for each other and makes us treat people of different creeds with more tolerance.

- Basic questions and brief answers
- Open, honest and inspiring
- Short chapters and paragraphs give background information

Burkhard Weitz

Burkhard Weitz was born in 1965. As a child he lived in Bethlehem for a number of years. After finishing school he studied religious sciences and theology and has spent some time abroad, e.g. in Palestine and the US. While training to become a clergyman he taught religious education at school. Since 1999 he has been working as a journalist and editor for the Protestant magazine Chrismon. Today he lives in Frankfurt with his family.
