

The background of the advertisement is a deep teal color, filled with a dense field of fine, golden-yellow sparkles and larger, soft-focus bokeh lights. Sweeping across the frame are several thick, wavy, metallic ribbons in shades of light blue and silver, each outlined with a thin, shimmering gold line. These ribbons create a sense of fluid motion and depth. In the lower third of the image, a small, detailed gold-colored mechanical watch movement is positioned as if it is traveling along one of these wavy paths.

Fiona MacKenzie loves Formula 1. And she hates Duncan McKinnon, the arrogant scottish driver from her father's team – his golden boy. Duncan returns her passionate dislike: he despises Fiona's credit card-fueled lifestyle, which, in truth, is just a desperate attempt to win her father's attention. But when that very father stands between Fiona and her biggest dream, she takes drastic action: she applies for a marketing position at a rival racing team – the same team Duncan McKinnon has just signed with for the upcoming season. Ever since he found out the truth about Fiona's father, Duncan wants nothing more to do with him. But now Fiona is working there of all places...

When it turns out they're bound to one another in a way neither of them can explain, Wanda follows him into his world – searching for answers. Why can't they let each other go? Why can Wanda see, feel, even taste him? And how is she supposed to know if she's truly falling for Neo... or just caught in the fever of the Muse? When the city of Munich announces a public art commission, Luis finally sees a chance to prove himself. But things get complicated when he clashes with Minnie, a painter who has little appreciation for his street art.
