Maybe now, maybe never, maybe someday ...

Gabriella, Joana and Karla share a flat. To finance their studies, they all work at a catering company. And, the three not only realize their professional dreams, but also find the love of their lives. Feel-good page turner for New Adults - as hot as the Brazilian sun and as seductive as a perfect chocolate mousse!

Gabrielle almost missed her plane in Brazil and now she sits next to this super rude guy. Great! She's flying to Munich to finally meet her biological father. Undercover, as she starts an internship in his catering company. On her first day in the kitchen, her instructor turns out to be, of all people, Anton. Her rude – or rather rudely handsome – seatmate from the plane! He not only lights a fire at the stove... Gabriella tries in vain to fight the sparks between them, because Anton has clear rules when it comes to relationships at work.

- Original plots in heartfelt narrations, leaving out familiar clichés
- Girl power: 3 self-confident protagonists and their strong friendship
- Stories about first steps towards independence: Career choices, fear of the future, parental pressure, exploring roots to find your place
