"Watch out! Kiss alarm!" whispers Anna to her sister Lotta as their relatives arrive for the family gathering. The girls enjoy the visit, but they don't like all these people giving them kisses. Fortunately they know how to show this. In this book the children have to cope with many other situations too. They repeatedly have to be brave and confident enough to admit their fear or discomfort, to argue and make up. To say no and set limits. Their stories can encourage small listeners to be more self-confident.
