Stolen Hearts and Lonely Dragons...

Gwin can hardly believe her ears when a talking black cat strikes up a conversation with her on a park bench – and he's not exactly polite, either. He invites her to enter a witch's magic shop, and from that moment on, Gwin's world is turned upside down. Behind the shop's ordinary-looking door lies a place full of wonders: singing cauldrons, whispering flames, and magical creatures beyond anything Gwin could have imagined. The kind witch, Madame Manou, invites her to stay and help out in the shop's enchanted café. But that takes practice – especially when you're asked to pluck a troll's back hair. One night, Gwin makes a shocking discovery: there's a dragon imprisoned in the basement, and he desperately needs her help to break free. But everyone knows dragons have no hearts... right?
