A funny picture book for conquering the fear of visiting a doctor - with many practical tips on vaccination for children and parents

- Helps against the fear of vaccination
- Offers conversation opportunities for families
- Relevant topic in the current Corona-Situation
- Child-friendly and understandably explained by the pediatrician Dr. med. Sibylle Mottl-Link

In the practice of pediatrician Dr. Modeling, the doctor's little "helper" – wooden spatula, rubber gloves and so on – try to relieve the young patient of the fear of vaccination. This book explains what a vaccination is good for and why sometimes unpleasant things are useful and important for us. It also explains other processes that have to do with the body, for example what saliva or ear wax are good for. With a bit of humour and the "jello exercise" the little jab at the end is no longer a problem.
