

Iris Hardt (Loewe)

illustrator

Iris Hardt grew up in the Ruhr area in the 1970s. After graduating from high school, she moved to Münster to study design at the University of Applied Sciences. As a freelancer, she has drawn children's books for many German publishers, some of them from the UK. She drew the "Why Stories to Read Aloud" and learned many interesting things along the way. She moved from Essen to Münster in 1992 for design studies, and still lives there with her family, drawing and working in a shared studio.
