Story

Their past is full of shadows. But together they are light.

Sofia Sartori has failed. It has always been her wish to become a successful actress, but shortly before her breakthrough in Hollywood, a tragic incident forces her to turn her back on the „dream factory“. Now she keeps her head above water in her hometown of Venice, working as a performer in a tourist theatre, determined never to return to cinema. This decision is shaken, however, when director Roger Sheffield shows up and asks her to play the female lead in his new project. Can Sofia forget what happened in Los Angeles and put herself in front of the camera once more? Especially when her co-star is none other than Orlando Grandin, who has never missed an opportunity to mock her since her fall?

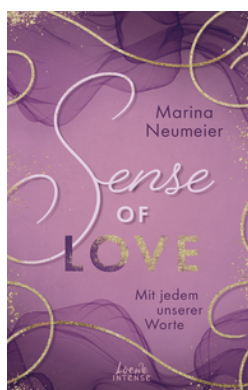

With the second volume of her Love trilogy, Marina Neumeier has created a second-chance romance that sensitively shows that MeToo can play a role in all walks of life and leave wounds in the most diverse ways.

- Sensitive take on important issues such as MeToo and slutshaming
- European setting – wanderlust guaranteed!
- Tender love story full of tingling moments
- For fans of Mona Kasten and Lilly Lucas
