All of this weird stuff simply is a crazy game. That's what Nick thinks when mysterious Mister Schmitt welcomes him to the secret school of the Federal Intelligence Service in Berlin. Yeah sure, secret agent! His father must have come up with that to surprise him. Nick's father is ambassador and visits all countries around the globe, thus Nick used to live with a foster family. Until now.

What happens in Vol. 2:

After three years of imprisonment in the camp of his enemy, Nick's father is back. They only have little time before Ben Nader is called to a new mission. In the capital of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, the intelligence service has to observe a meeting between the head of states of the ten most influential industrial nations. Nick is skeptical – was his father brainwashed during his imprisonment? He decides to follow him and witnesses a hostage-taking in the center of Kinshasa. Is his father one of those pulling the strings?

Arno Strobel

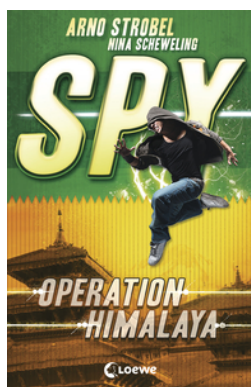

Arno Strobel was born in Saarlouis in 1962, and studied IT before working for a large German bank in Luxemburg. When he was nearly forty, he started writing short stories which he published on internet forums, before tackling his first novel. It took nearly three years, a research trip to Rome and many ups and downs, before he managed to complete it. Then, after failing to find a publisher, he and two friends set up their own publishing house and printed the book themselves.

A few weeks after its appearance, the TV rights were secured by German TV. Since 2010, Arno Strobel has been writing for Fischer Verlag and gaining considerable success with his psychological thrillers for adults, which feature regularly in the bestseller lists and have already been sold under licence to many countries.
