What happens in Volume 2:

High up in the Northern Tar Sea, Edda suspects her younger brother Tobin, who has been kidnapped by the Crow King. To find him, she needs a ship. And the Flowing Map. Because the position of the islands in the Silver Lake is constantly changing and the road to the north is long and dangerous. But first, Edda's fate leads her to the south of the island kingdom to Akoban. Edda is full of hope and sets off on a new adventure. On the tropical island of Bela-Haven, she fights alongside the Irsu against the Aquarius and helps them to create a long-awaited secret weapon. For that, the Irsu will hand over the map. But on the way to the north, what Edda had already guessed is confirmed. She herself is a daughter of the islands, a high-born of the Astadors royal family. And she meets her old enemy Talin Brand, who seems more connected with her past than she likes.
