Story

Meander and Olivia are worried because they suspect that their friend Remus is behind these attacks; after all, he's behaving so strangely. Or maybe it is the mysterious god, whose words Remus has recently started attending to?

- scary adventures in legendary Rome
- a realistically gruesome read
- evocative illustrations by Barbara Korthues

A series of mysterious break-ins are happening in Rome:

Always at night-time

Always via the roof

Always targeting innocent people

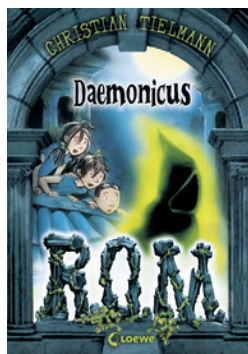

Christian Tielmann

Christian Tielmann was born in Wuppertal in 1971. He studied philosophy and German literature in Freiburg and Hamburg. He has been writing very successful books for children and young people since 1999, for various publishing companies. Nowadays, he lives in Cologne, and was inspired to write his R.O.M. series by walking through the Roman-Germanic Museum there.
