Story

The Vulkanos go treasure hunting

Flambia and Krato listen avidly to Grandpa Vulko's tale: legend has it, he tells them, that there are thousands of sparkling diamonds in the Stone Steppes, guarded by invisible creatures and highly prized by evil plenguins. Krato knows how a legend works – one half is true and the other half isn't. He feels sure that in this case only the half about the diamonds is true. And so Flambia and Krato set off on a journey – treasure hunting in the Stone Steppes!

Press commentaries

Press reviews for the series:

“Franziska Gehm has created a fantastical volcano-world. Humorously, the author plays with terms around volcano-life.”

Birgit Franz, Eselsohr

“Smart, funny, and with cute illustrations, the Volcanos light a bright reading fire under first reader’s behinds.”

Almanac of Children’s Literature Book Store Schmitz Junior

“Again, very, very funny.”

Beate Schröder, Westfälische Nachrichten

“The Volcanos are loveable figures who are immediately taken into first reader’s hearts. Great illustrations round of the stories.”

Renate Pinzke, Hamburger Morgenpost

“An absolutely brilliant friendship story.”

Beate Schröder, Westfälische Nachrichten

“Adorable-hilarious story.”

Martina Hildebrand, Nürnberger Nachrichten
