What happens in Volume 1:

Finally holidays! Mattis and his friend Kiste are excited to spend time in summer camp, finally no adults – or at least hardly any. When Mattis introduces the box as his “cuddly box” to the other children, Kiste is not thrilled; but at least they want to help Mattis hiding Kiste from the adults. Mattis is satisfied: That would be settled! But then Kiste is suddenly gone!!!

Fortunately, not long: The others played a prank on Mattis and put Kiste in a tree at the top. . . Half as bad, Mattis only has to climb up and get his friend down there again. This shall not be a problem. . . If it weren't for this owl who suddenly grabs the box – and flies away with it. . . What a shock!!! How could this happen? While Mattis and the other children go searching in the forest together, Kiste enjoys his trip for the time being. Flying is actually quite nice – and the birds in the forest are actually quite nice too – until Kiste gets into serious trouble after all. . . Will Mattis and the others find him in time?

Patrick Wirbeleit

Patrick Wirbeleit is so tall that he can easily touch the ceiling of an average sized apartment. That is, without having to be on tiptoes! This is great! He usually can impress his surroundings more with that ability than with the fact that he is an illustrator and author of children's books. Particularly because the beautiful colours of his illustrations are not put on paper by himself, but by his wife Frauke – who writes stories herself as well.

Besides, he believes there are way too little funny children's books in Germany – that is why he invented the 'Primeval Robot' in 2009, a prize for the funniest children's book of the year.

Multi Monster Twinkeltote is his first book with Loewe.
