What happens in Volume 2:

Vincent (half ghost) lives in the attic with his new roommate, the guinea pig lady Fritzi. The greatest thing is that Fritzi is also an half-ghost animal. Vincent's been sad lately. He'd love to have a cool superpower, like Fritzi. Because she can turn into a piglet on a full moon. And what can Vincent do? Nothing – he's not even really creepy. Maybe he's not a real half-ghost after all?

But Fritzi is convinced that her friend is something special. For sure, other half-ghost animals can tell them how to get a superpower. And where better to look than in the zoo? Together with their friend Beule, the owl, they set out on an adventurous search. But it's not that easy, because at night the zoo is much creepier than expected. . . It's pretty scary and there are lots of greedy animals. Plus, the friends must always be on guard against the nasty cat. It quickly becomes clear that many animals in the zoo have great abilities, but no superpowers. After an exhausting search and a chase with the nasty cat, they meet a llama that can turn invisible. Bingo! Finally, Vincent gets tips on how to get his half-ghost superpower: he just has to really believe in the ghost world and that he is something special!
